

THE CLAY SANSKRIT LIBRARY

Co-published by New York University Press and the JJC Foundation.

“One of the most admirable publishing projects now afoot.” —NEW CRITERION

For many interested readers access to Classical Sanskrit literature has been hindered by an unfamiliar language and a difficult script. The Clay Sanskrit Library makes everything easier: the Sanskrit text, written in familiar Roman letters, faces the English translation, and the convenient pocket size is both elegant and practical. In addition to the nine volumes of the Ramáyana and thirty-two volumes of the Maha-bhárata, The Clay Sanskrit Library will include more than fifty other classics of Sanskrit literature, totaling more than 100 classic Sanskrit texts. Each book is published in a jacketed hardcover edition, in a compact 4.5” x 6.5” format, designed to bring literature of India to the general public, scholars, and students.
